

The Sugar Market

Stocks Here Low
Activity Is Shown
Japanese Prices

INDICATIONS are not lacking of an improvement in the demand for refined sugar. While, however, there is a steadier flow of orders and inquiries, the quantities moving are still below normal. There is every evidence of a real revival and the fact that stocks of refined sugar in Shanghai are extremely small lends hope to a better state of affairs in the near future. The situation undoubtedly is more favorable for the placing of further business in the commodity than for some weeks past. In fact, since the beginning of this month the activity in the sugar market has been gaining proportions, with a steady rise in values. The present rate stands at Tia 11.55 for delivery Chinese tenth month and Tia 11.475 for the eleventh month.

Strange to say, the ruling quotation for Japanese refined sugar is the highest witnessed in the local market since January of this year. At the height of the sugar boom from February until April the highest point reached was only Tia 11 per picul. It is therefore, not surprising that this fact should be causing the Chinese merchants some concern about the future.

Of course, the factor responsible for the steady ascension in price in recent weeks is the bareness of the stocks in Shanghai. All grades of sugar are lower than in normal times. Against an average holding of some 200,000 bags, we have something like 50,000 bags on hand at the present time. At the end of October last the holdings of Shanghai sugar merchants in respect of the different grades read as follows:—Japanese refined 9,000 bags; Hongkong refined 10,000 bags; Java 15,000 bags; Philippine 10,000 bags and Chinese native sugar 5,000 bags.

SITUATION IN CUBA

The total of 52,000 bags for October looks very small alongside September's 150,000 bags. Cuba is the pivotal position, and the reduction in output there is causing many people to put on their thinking caps. The balance of the crop available for shipment is small. The balance of the Java crop has been sold at firm rates for Indian and Baltic destinations, except for a portion which was sent to France, while the destruction of 100,000 tons of sugar in the earthquake in Japan will complicate the position still further.

The increase in consumption in America is expected to cause American refiners to bid for supplies. Visible supplies all over have fallen off to a very low point. All this points to a real shortage, a deduction which is supported by the final estimates of the Cuban crop, which is put at 400,000 tons less than that of last season.

The shortage of Japanese refined sugar in Shanghai has been brought about by the late anti-Japanese boycott and is a direct result of it. No transactions in Japanese refined sugar had been run through between April and July last when the boycott agitation was in full swing, but the quantity contracted in the period, February-April, sufficed to provide for an ample supply in coming months. Contracts for the supply of this grade of sugar were made then for long period shipments and for large quantities, each shipment averaging some 3,000 to 5,000 bags. In other words, sugar had been arriving here during the boycott days against contracts concluded in pre-boycott months.

SPECULATORS ACTIVE

Speculation has consequently been on the Shanghai Sugar Exchange, and the operators working on the low stocks on hand here together with the declaration of the refiners in Japan not to reduce their rates have been emboldened in their manipulations. There has thus set in a movement to buy, and this in combination with the action of the bulls has served to stiffen values and push them to the present height.

It is curious how the Chinese mind adapts itself to the changed condition. A month ago

NEW ATTACK ON BALDWIN IS LAUNCHED BY LIBERALS

Premier Is Flayed By Lloyd George And Asquith

BLIND, IMPOTENT

Britain's Prestige In World Affairs Lost, Claim

(Reuter's Service)

London, Nov. 19.—A Liberal Party manifesto, signed by Mr. Asquith and Mr. Lloyd George on behalf of the Party, declares the Government, elected a year ago on a program of five years of tranquility, has suddenly decided to plunge the country into the turmoil of a General Election on an unproved and unprovable allegation that tariffs will cure unemployment.

The manifesto condemns the precipitancy of the Government's action, which, it says, is solely due to the signal and disastrous failure of its conduct of foreign policy in the great matters essential to Britain's livelihood. The Government's blindness, indecision and impotence have been such that it has ceased to exercise a guiding influence in European affairs. The same applies to its Eastern policy. The shameful Treaty of Lausanne surrendered all securities for British commerce in Turkey, and a similar fate threatens Britain's valuable markets in the Far East.

The Liberal Party's policy is prompt settlement of reparations, coupled with consideration of Inter-Allied debts, and an earnest effort to co-operate with America and to reopen full relations with Russia.

The manifesto declares that a capital levy would be disastrous. It demands improvement and development of Britain and the Empire, for example, transport, afforestation, cheap power, development of Imperial resources, especially in the Crown Colonies, railway building in the Dominions and India, facilitation of overseas settlement, cheapening the means of inter-Imperial transport and promotion of co-operation between employers and the worker. It declares that agriculture requires stable prices, greater economic resources, security of tenure and improved transport, and advocates credit facilities for the farmer, cooperative marketing with Government assistance, retrenchment of public expenditure, local option in regard to rating, and land reform.

U.S. SILENT ON PLAN FOR LOAN TO AID GERMANS

Proposal Regarded As Mere Fantasy For The Present

BY UNITED PRESS

Washington, Nov. 20.—Government officials here refuse to express any opinion or make any statements regarding the reports that a loan of $150,000,000 to Germany is contemplated in order to relieve distress among the German people this winter.

The reports, which claimed to originate in fairly authentic quarters, stated that President Coolidge was considering approval of such a loan providing that the money were spent in America for wheat.

This, it was pointed out, would aid Germany and at the same time render substantial help to the American wheat growers.

The general opinion in official circles here is that any proposal for a large loan to Germany at the present time must be considered as fantastic, to say the least.

United States Senator William H. King of Utah, who has just returned from an extensive tour of Europe, has issued a statement in which he declares that there is no shortage of grain in Germany at the present time.

"Any proposal for relief work in Germany on a large scale at present is unnecessary," Senator King declares.

Thanksgiving Proclamation

BY PRESIDENT CALVIN COOLIDGE

Through Courtesy Of United States Consul-General Edwin S. Cunningham

THE American people from their earliest days have observed the wise custom of acknowledging each year the bounties with which Divine Providence has favored them. In the beginning this acknowledgment was a voluntary return of thanks by the community for the fruitfulness of the harvest. Through our mode of life has greatly changed, this custom has always survived. It has made Thanksgiving day not only one of the oldest but one of the most characteristic observances of our country. On that day in home and church, in family and in public gathering, the whole Nation has, for generations, paid the tribute due from grateful hearts for blessings bestowed.

To center our thoughts in this way upon the favor which we have been shown has been altogether wise and desirable. It has given opportunity justly to balance the good and the evil which we have experienced. In that, we have never failed to find reasons for being grateful to God for a generous preponderance. In the least propitious times a broad contemplation of our whole position has never failed to disclose overwhelming reasons for thankfulness. Thus viewing our situation we have found warrant for a more hopeful and confident attitude toward the future.

In this current year we now approach the time which has been accepted by custom as the most fitting for the calm survey of our estate and the return of thanks. We shall the more keenly realize our good fortune if we will in deep sincerity, give to it due thought and more, especially if we will compare with it that of any other community in the world.

THE year has brought to our people two tragic experiences which have deeply affected them. One was the death of our beloved President Harding which has been mourned wherever there is a realization of the worth of high ideals, noble purpose, and unselfish service carried even to the end of supreme sacrifice. His loss recalled the Nation to a less capricious and more charitable attitude, sobered the whole thought of the country.

A LITTLE later came the unparalleled disaster to the friendly people of Japan. This called forth from the people of the United States a demonstration of deep and humane feeling. It was wrought into the substance of good works. It created the evidences of our international friendship which is a guarantee of world peace. It replenished the charitable impulse of the country. By experience such as these men and nations are tested and refined. We have been with much of material prosperity.

WE shall be better able to appreciate it if we remember the privations others have suffered and we shall be the more worthy of it if we use it for their relief. We will do well then, to render thanks for the good that has come to us and show by our actions that we have become stronger, wiser, and truer by the chastenings which have been imposed upon us. We will thus prepare ourselves for the part we must take in a world which forever needs the full measure of service. We have been a most favored people, we ought to be a most generous people. We have been a most blessed people, we ought to be a most thankful people.

HEREFORE I, Calvin Coolidge, President of the United States, do hereby fix and designate Thursday the twentieth day of November as Thanksgiving Day, and recommend its general observance throughout the land. It is urged that the people gathering in their homes and their usual places of worship give expression to their gratitude for the benefit and blessings that a gracious Providence has bestowed upon them, and seek the guidance of Almighty God that they may deserve a continuance of His favor. In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be fixed the great seal of the United States, done at the city of Washington, this fifth day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three and of Independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-eighth.

Calvin Coolidge, by the President,
Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State.

JUDGE LOBINGIER GOES TO HANKOW NEXT FRIDAY

Expects To Be Absent For About Ten Days

Judge Charles S. Lobingier of the United States Court for China, accompanied by Mr. R. T. Peyton Griffin, the official court reporter, will leave for Hankow on the S.S. Kungwo on Friday night.

Judge Lobingier will hold a short session of the American Court in the Yangtze inland port, hearing three or four civil cases that are on the docket there. He expects to return to Shanghai in ten days. Two or three decisions will probably be handed down before his departure it is possible that he will be able to complete his judgment in the Kearny cases before he leaves.

Several important cases are on the calendar to be heard immediately upon Judge Lobingier's return and it is expected there will be an extremely interesting and busy series of sessions beginning the first week in December and continuing until the Christmas holidays.

Premier Mussolini said further that the Fascist Government is favorable to intercourse with the Vatican, and that since the Fascists had come into power the old problem whether or not Catholics may be good citizens and vice versa has been solved.

This statement by the Premier has made a profound and favorable impression in political circles, and it was specially appreciated by the Vatican.

The toast of the day was proposed by Mr. O. M. After giving a brief history of the service, Mr. Green paid a tribute to Sir Roderick for the able manner in which he has perpetuated the policy of the late Baron de Reuter, which was to give the public the fact, the bare truth, and let the readers form their own conclusions.

CONTROL OF GERMANY TO BE RESUMED BY ALLIES

Action On Return Of Crown Prince Is Debated

STRONG PROTEST

Stiff Note Will Be Dispatched To Berlin

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 19.—The Conference of Ambassadors have agreed in regard to resumption of Inter-Allied military control of Germany. They are still deliberating with regard to the return of the ex-Crown Prince.

The agreement has up to the present not been published. It awaits ratification by the French Cabinet.

It is understood that the agreement provides for the sending of a stiff note of protest to Germany without defining sanctions, which will be discussed later if Germany does not give satisfaction.

A Quai d'Orsay communiqué explains that M. Poincaré's declaration that France will not evacuate the occupied territories before the Versailles Treaty has been completely executed, referred to the occupied territories on the left bank of the Rhine and to the bridge-heads, but did not apply to the Ruhr, in which connection no decision can be taken without previous agreement between the French and Belgian Governments.

(French Wireless through Reuter)

Paris, Nov. 19.—Commenting on the questions before the Conference of Ambassadors (prior to the announcement that agreement had been reached), the Temps says: "Everyone, except those who desire to overthrow the Treaty and to upset the frontiers of Europe, hopes that a final agreement of the Governments will be recorded."

The Journal des Debats states: "France is not the only one threatened: all the States that have been created by the dismemberment of the Central Empires of Europe have become greater at their expense feel themselves in peril. It is for them all to keep on their guard."

The Liberator asks whether the differences of opinion amongst the Allies are not reducing themselves to quarrels. "Let us not therefore, talk of sanctions, but rather of precautions. Are not precautions legitimate? Is not Marshal Foch's report to the Conference decisive? Would it not be absolute suicide on the part of the Allies to allow the German Army to increase from the cadres of the Reichswehr without having made ourselves secure against this danger?"

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Nov. 19.—The Cabinet has unanimously approved M. Poincaré's attitude during the negotiations of the Conference of Ambassadors. The final decision now depends on the views of the Allied Governments on the agreement in principle reached by the Conference.

(Italian Wireless through Reuter)

Rome, Nov. 19.—The Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs, from all the information it has received, believes that there is no foundation for the rumors of a possible move for re-establishing ex-Kaiser William on the German throne. It is, however, closely watching the situation brought about by the return of the ex-Crown Prince. The attitude of the Italian Government towards any eventual attempt at Hohenzollern restoration would be firmly to uphold the stipulations of the Versailles Treaty. While it is opposed to any attempt at such restoration it holds that any action should be taken by all the Allies in agreement. It is opposed, too, to any nation taking advantage of monarchist activities to carry out reprisals without the full consent of all the Allies who signed the Versailles Treaty.

The newspapers have not up to the present, commented on the French threat of sanctions, except the monarchist Kreuzzeitung and the nationalist Deutsche Zeitung. American Express Chief Succumbs At Home In New York

Offices Here To Close In Respect To Stricken President

(Exclusive CHINA PRESS)
New York, Nov. 20.—Mr. George C. Taylor, president of the American Express Company and the American Railway Express Company, a subsidiary organization, died at his home here Sunday.
Mr. W. D. Inman, manager of the Shanghai offices of the American Express Company, received a cablegram yesterday afternoon informing him of Mr. Taylor's death. He died suddenly on Sunday following a heart attack. Funeral services will be held in New York tomorrow.

Mr. Taylor, according to Mr. Inman, was one of the outstanding figures in the transportation field in the United States. He began his career on the fall-end of an express wagon, "smashing" baggage and running up and down stairs with express packages and doing other menial labor.
Gradually working his way up he became manager of a small office in the Western states, then district manager, and finally became Vice-President and General Manager with offices in New York. He became the nominal as well as the active head of the organization in 1911.
The local offices will be closed tomorrow morning, reopening at 2 o'clock, after the funeral in New York.

It is understood that the party will stay in Shanghai till the end of this month, and that many receptions are being prepared by various Chinese and Japanese organizations in their honor.

Donald, the distinguished chairman of that body, who for years had made a close study of wireless and of wireless news, had condemned the British official wireless, which was broadcast daily by the authorities in London. Such a service ought to be conducted, Mr. Donald had said, "by some entirely independent news organization like Reuters or the Press Association." For the purposes of a foreign news service of this kind, Reuters and the Press Association, the great island news organization of the United Kingdom, were Sir Roderick pointed out, were not the same, and while he was not prepared to express an opinion on Mr. Robert Donald's proposal until he had had an opportunity of considering it in a concrete and definite form, it certainly seemed to present an alternative to the system which Mr. Donald and others had criticized.

There were present at the tiffin the following: Messrs. R. W. Davis, Managing Director of the North China Daily News; O. M. Green, Editor of the North China Daily News; C. H. Webb, Editor of the China Press; W. J. Davey, Managing Director of the Shanghai Mercury; W. A. Donaldson, Editor of the Shanghai Mercury; A. P. Finch, Shanghai Times; J. B. Evans of the Shanghai staff of Reuters' Limited.

Sir Roderick was the guest of honor at a dinner party given by Mr. Yada, the Japanese Consul-General, last night at the Shanghai Club. He will be entertained at dinner tonight at the Yih Ping Shang Hotel by the leading Chinese daily newspapers and the Shanghai Journalists' Club. He will leave for Peking tomorrow. A special car has been ordered for him by the Ministry of Communications to take him to the capital. He will return here in a fortnight and then proceed to Japan and India.

In conclusion the speaker deprecated the various propaganda wireless services from which the press and the public at the present time were suffering. These services were a pernicious survival of the war and should long since have been abandoned. The American Government was the only Government which, with the practical sense that usually marked its actions, had taken this step.
Only the previous day he had received a report from London of a meeting of the Empire Press Union, at which Mr. Robert

Former President To Blame For Faults Of Treaty, They Assert

Rome, Nov. 15.—Mr. Wilson's accusation that France and other countries had made a scrap of paper of the Treaty of Versailles is the subject of some hot comments today in the political circles of Rome.

In reply to questions of journalists some Members of Parliament have given their views. We regret that he has seen fit to discuss the Versailles Treaty. He is in fact largely responsible for everything that is bad in it."

Senator Cipicco declared: "The Treaty is so badly written that it is subject to contradictory interpretations. As for Italy, it is due specially to Mr. Wilson's obstinate attitude during the Peace Conference that some of our most

No Heat Wasted

The cheerful glow of the Madison Square Stoves is as welcome as any open fire, and these stoves have greater advantages. No dust, smoke or fumes can escape into the room. They are easy to light, and heat very quickly. The reversible flue allows free draught when necessary, or causes the heat to radiate with only the fumes escaping.

SELF FEEDING

The top swings round for filling the container. The fire receives a gradual supply of fuel without attention. Limited space prevents mention of all the advantages of these stoves. We have a design suitable for every purpose.

DAME ADELAIDE ANDERSON SOON TO ARRIVE HERE

Famous Factory Labor Expert Expected November 30

Dame Adelaide Anderson, formerly Principal Lady Inspector of Factories in England, who had been invited to Shanghai to confer here on industrial conditions, particularly with reference to child labor, is now expected to arrive here about the end of this month, according to advices just received.

Dame Adelaide was due to reach Hongkong on November 14 and will spend some days in the Colony getting in touch with those concerned with the recent child labor regulations. After a brief visit to Canton, where her arrangements, as in Hongkong, are in the hands of National Christian Council representatives, Dame Adelaide will come North, reaching Shanghai the latter part of the month, probably by the Empress of Russia, due November 20.

The National Christian Council, as previously reported, had written Dame Adelaide requesting her advice and help and had received a reply recording her entire sympathy with the work of the Council and willingness to give her services to its Industrial Committee.

Requests have come to the National Christian Council from various cities asking for a visit by the distinguished expert. Among them is a request from the Child Labor Commission appointed by the Municipal Council that Dame Adelaide shall sit with this group while she is in Shanghai. The committee in charge of her arrangements has decided in view of her peculiar fitness to serve on this commission that for the major part of her time in China, Shanghai should be her headquarters.

Arrangements are being made for her to meet the leading employers of labor as soon as possible after her arrival. She is not expected to address public meetings, her main work being rather in making a personal study of local conditions. Those who know Dame Adelaide Anderson are confident that her visit will be of great service to all who are seeking for light on improving factory conditions. As communications can be addressed c/o National Christian Council, 5 Quincean Gardens, Shanghai.

Opium Sellers Heavily Fined

Four Chinese convicted of keeping opium for sale at 17 North Fokien Road draw sizeable fines in the Mixed Court yesterday. The case was prosecuted by Assistant Commissioner of Police Springfield, who with other officers raided the place on Monday, discovering a quantity of the drug, labels, etc., and documents relating to opium deals. Two of the accused were fined $100 each and two $50 each.

Assistant Commissioner Springfield also appeared to prosecute three Chinese arrested on charges of aiding and abetting in the sale of opium at 513 Loong Za Ka and 1046-7 East Hanbury Road. He stated that documents seized indicated opium dealings on a large scale and said that 50 pounds of opium was found on the premises. Mr. F. W. Hadley appeared for the defendant and asked a remand as he had not had time to go into the case. The hearing was adjourned until Thursday, bail of $300 being allowed.

Dairy Mistress, Foreseeing Fine, Is Late At Court

Zien Ah-ling, proprietress of the Zoo Kee Dairy, is palpably a person of forethought—or one who profits by experience.

June Zien was scheduled to appear in the Mixed Court yesterday to answer charges of selling milk to which 7 percent of water had been added and from which 22 percent of the fat had been extracted. When the case was called, however, she was not on hand. After it had been passed and a fresh summons had been ordered to issue, she appeared.

"I was out collecting money to pay my fine," she explained to the Bench.

Sanitary Inspector Jones, who prosecuted the case, told the Court that Mrs. Zien has a very nice little dairy, but that she has been a frequent offender in the matter of adulterating milk, and had many previous convictions to her discredit. The present case will come on again tomorrow.

VALUABLE FUR DISAPPEARS FROM CAMERON SHOP

Coat Put Away Friday, Missing Saturday, Baffles
Police

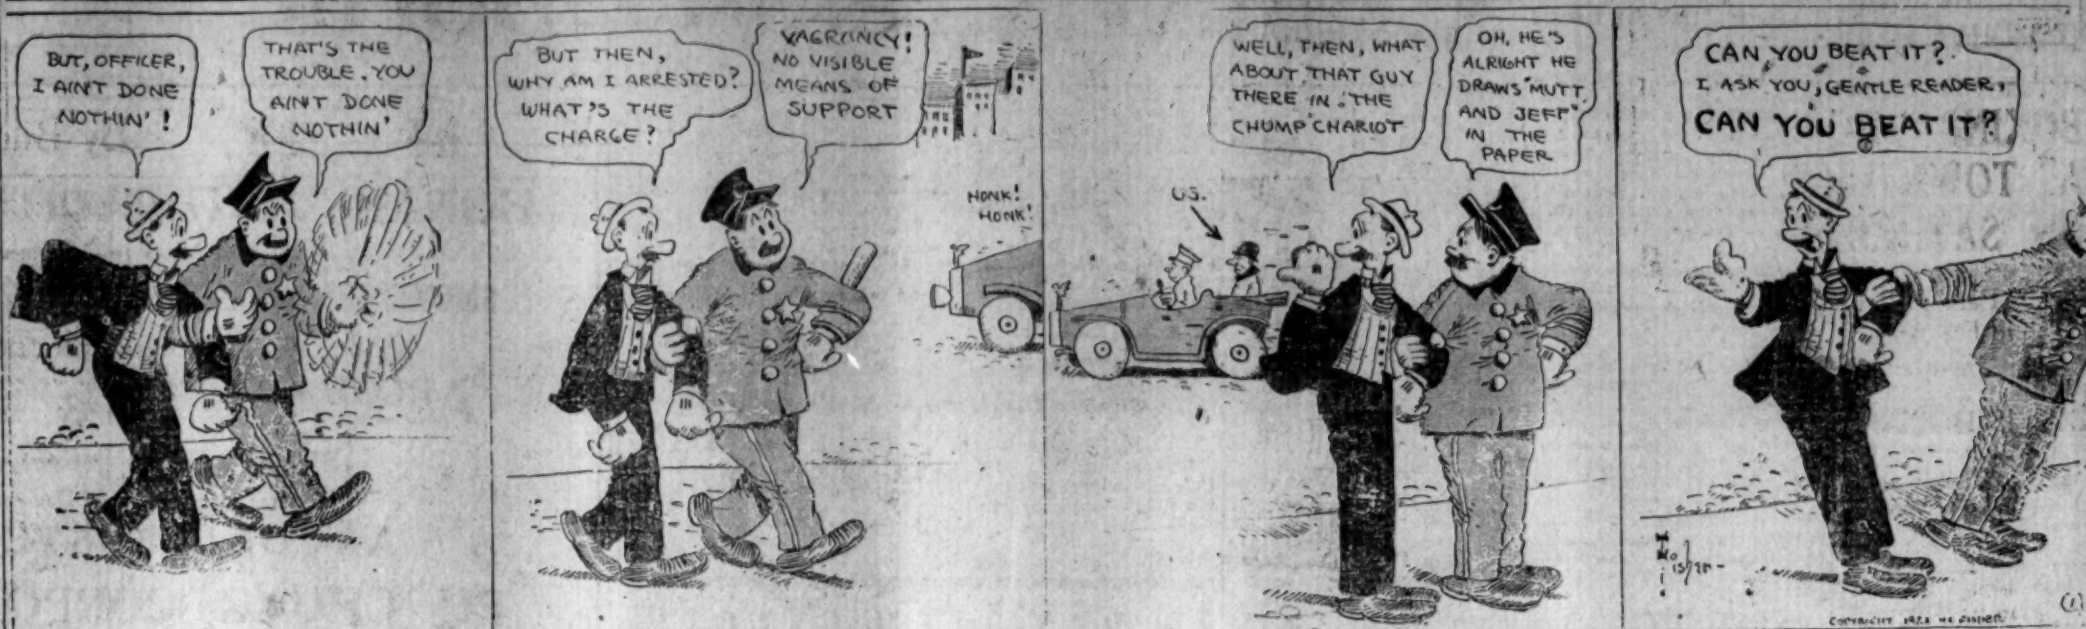

Bubbling Well police are baffled by the mysterious disappearance of a valuable fur coat that was missing from the Ethel Cameron shop on Bubbling Well Road on Saturday.

The coat, a long minkskin with large collar brocade lining, valued at $1,000, was shown to a customer on Friday evening just before closing time, according to the report made to the police, and was then put back in the fur case.

On Saturday, when the owner of the shop went to the case for it, the coat was discovered to be missing. An inventory of the shop soon showed that it had not been misplaced and the police were immediately notified. Nothing else was missing and no signs of any forced entrance to the building could be discovered.

Mr. Hardman admitted his lights had gone out, but denied the allegation of fast driving.

The Chinese sugar dealer was working on a lower market, but now he has studied facts a little more carefully and has come to the conclusion that prices will not go down very much.

The arrivals of the commodity from the different producing centers are still below the average. Those from Japan amount to about a thousand bags a week, from Java some 2,000 bags, while the exact amount coming from Hongkong is not easily ascertainable. At any rate, the supplies from Hongkong are not heavy, but are expected to be augmented shortly.

The Java market is very active at present, and the quotation at Sourabaya has been rising steadily since the beginning of November. Java refined sugar on November 12 was rated at 19 guilders for December-January delivery, against 18 1/4 guilders on November 6. On the 12th the quotation declined to 18 7/8 guilders, presumably resulting from bears trying to depress the market. India is likely to re-enter the Java market as a purchaser shortly.

The Cuban market is a little higher. From the beginning of this month until November 8 the price of Cuban raw sugar was round $45.18 per 100 lbs. c. and 1 New York. Since then the price has been improving and is now standing at $45.50 per 100 lbs. Refiners in the United States are buying large quantities at this rate but very cautiously at the same time, as the European beet crop is expected to show a big increase.

BOXING SHOW AT TOWN HALL ON SATURDAY

Prof. Parkes Arranges

DAVIS HOLDS OFF

Sam To Postpone Carlton
Card Until Next Week

The chief item on the boxing bill of fare this week will be a Town Hall show on Saturday evening, with matches between the Public School boys and the gladiators from the Crusier Hawkins now in port.

This show is being staged by Mr. G. H. Parkes, boxing instructor in the Public Schools, who is going on home leave shortly. Mr. Parkes has developed some good boxers among the Schoolers and as the Hawkins boasts of some handle men with the gloves the show Saturday ought to be a good one.

Sam Davis, the Carlton matchmaker, had a show arranged for this week, but in view of the Town Hall party he decided to hold over until next week, when he will get together a fine card.

The Saturday night show will be under amateur rules, with two minute rounds. This arrangement gives the boys an opportunity to be at their best, and to mix it in lively fashion.

Next week may see a good wrestling match, along with the boxing. Captain Barrett, it is understood, has unearthed a Sikh policeman big enough to push over the Ears building, and as Baumlester, the Russian champion, has been looking for a rival of that size the match has been arranged tentatively for Tuesday evening, at the Olympic Theater. The Public Works department will be called upon to reinforce the stage of the theater and to brace the walls, so the two man mountains can't shake the structure off its foundations.

Firpo Again On Dempsey's Trail

New York, Nov. 17.—Luis Firpo, South American heavyweight pugilist, who recently gave Jack Dempsey, world's champion, the toughest battle of his ring career, expects to return to the United States in the spring for a series of about twelve fights leading up to a return match with Dempsey, it was announced here today.

The Dempsey-Firpo fight probably will occur in New York next Labor Day.

WESTA: That stuff about Hagen having absolute confidence in his ability to sink a sixty foot chip shot from a sand trap sounds like the bunk to me. It stands to reason that no golfer—not even Hagen—could entertain more than an outside hope of putting one down from that distance and when he speaks of being 'amazed' when the ball failed to drop it listens very much like spooning.—Duffer.

It would sound like the bunk to most anybody not familiar with the ways of champions, particularly their mental attitude. But to those who know of the lofty contempt with which these birds look down on the opposition such a statement by one of their number is comprehensible. They can because they think they can, and because they can they are champions.

Gene Sarazen, the 20 years old Italian-American who won nearly everything in sight last year in American golf, and who repeated in one of the big championships this year is so supremely confident of his ability to sweep everything and everybody aside in his march to leadership that he gives strangers an impression of being a hopeless swell-head, when as a matter of fact he is a modest youth.

Sarazen was described by an English writer as "beligerently confident." He is absolutely sure of himself under all circumstances, and because of this state of mind he lashes into his tee shots with every ounce of power he possesses, and plays his approaches with a freedom that contemplates only the objective, with never a single thought of dire consequences that might result from either a timid stroke or one of too much boldness.

AND right there is the great difference between a champion and the rest of us. When the champion steps up to the tee he doesn't see the cross bunker out in front. Not for one millionth of one second does he speculate upon the possibility of getting over. The rest of us are torn by fears of hitting out of bounds, or of topping into the rough, or of hitting a hop-skipper that will finally end up in the bunker. And it is for the very reason that we think of all of these horrible contingencies that most of them come to pass.

The champions do not even think of them. They think only in terms of long, straight drives; of approaches jammed right up against the pin, and even dropping in occasionally, and of getting down with a single putt. That is what they figure on and if by any chance they miss on their calculations they are truly amazed.

Well, assuming all this to be true, what does it prove? What difference does it make to you or me, both of us being hopeless duffers, what the champions do, or what they think?

It makes this difference: that if we hope to improve our game we must think less about our hands, less about stance, grip, swing or follow through, and more about our mental attitude. It shows that we must "loosen up," and that we must play with a freedom unrestricted by fear of what may happen if we fail.

We have much to gain and nothing to lose thereby, since our scores couldn't be worse than they are, hey?

Fuh Tan Quint Beats St. John's; Amateurs Win

BY K. S. CHANG

The second and third games on schedule of the Chinese Basketball League were played off yesterday. Fuh Tan University defeated the St. John's team while the Amateurs came out victorious over the All-Blacks.

The St. John's basketball team met its first defeat in two years yesterday afternoon when it was trimmed by the Fuh Tan five to the tune of 25 to 16 at the latter's outdoor court at Kiangwan. It is indeed surprising news to all basketball followers who have been figuring that the "Jesuit" ball-players, who went through the Chinese league without a single defeat last season and won the Intercollegiate Basketball championship title of 1923, would experience no trouble in capturing this year's league championship and maintain its supremacy in the game. But yesterday's result upsets all hope.

It certainly would be harsh to say that the St. John's team has no more chance to get the championship this year. The league is just starting, and there are about 27 games more to be played by the different teams. One game lost is naturally not to be seriously considered, and the St. John's team may have all the chance in the world to carry away this season's honors. But the prospects are not very bright, for three of the best men in the team have dropped out and they are now replaced by three second string players.

A resolution has just been passed by the authority of the University that any of her athletes should take up only one kind of sport at a time, in order to avoid the danger of overworking and injuring the player's physique. The three players, who have left the team are important figures in the football team which has an eye on the East China Intercollegiate Football championship this year. As the school values this title more than the basketball one, the three crack basketballers, F. S. Tsang, right guard, P. T. Li, left guard, and "Donkey" Yui, right forward, quit the game to train hard in football.

With a team thus crippled by the absence of its three regulars, the Fuh Tan players had quite an easy time yesterday afternoon. Their score soared high and fast from the very beginning. T. C. Lee, their center netted four goals inside a few minutes which were followed by a couple more from S. M. Chao, the left forward. St. John's then tightened up. F. C. Tsang, right forward, succeeded in caging three baskets in short intervals. I. V. Doong, who played as running guard also netted two. At lemon time, the score stood as 18 to 11, with the Fuh Tan team leading.

Tsang of St. John's opened score in the second half with a beautiful shot after about three minutes' play. After another minute, Doong again contributed one, making the score stand as 18 to 15. Then for more than 12 minutes, that score stood unchanged. Both teams failed to cage any basket, in spite of each party's persistent efforts. Many long shots were wasted and several near shots narrowly missed the baskets. But during the last three minutes, the Fuh Tan players again ran wild and succeeded in scoring seven points during that short period, while the Saints vainly attempted to pile up their score.

The game on the whole was fast and clean, due to the able ruling of Dr. Gray. There were several personal fouls especially on the Fuh Tan side in the first half, and the Doctor, a veteran player himself who insisted on clean play, and no mercy with his whistle. The second period was therefore marked with only one personal foul.

The summaries:

Fuh Tan 25.—S. M. Chao 11, F. L. Woo and Liu 11, T. C. Li 6, C. T. Bao 10, F. L. Ho 10.

St. John's 16.—T. T. Ling and King 11, F. C. Tsang 11, C. T. Zung 6, I. V. Doong 10, Y. T. Yang 10.

Goals from fouls: Doong 1, Liu 2.

Goals from floor: Li 5, Tsang 4, Chao 3, Doong 3, Bao 1, Liu 1. Timer: Er. Referee: Dr. Gray. Scorer: Zung.

The Amateur All-Whites Game. The game was played in the gymnasium of the Chinese Y.M.C.A. before a big crowd. As the score was very close throughout the game was very interesting and toward the end, it was rather exciting. The score was so close that only when the last whistle was blown, the Amateurs realized that they had copped the game. With the score standing as 26-26 and only one more minute to play, each team put up its last and greatest effort to gain the winning points. Tsang, left forward and captain of the Amateurs, at length succeeded in caging the ball with a one-hand shot after some passing work among the forwards. Then Wu, the right forward followed with two more goals in rapid succession. The game ended with the Amateurs on the long end of a 32-26 score.

Although the game was fast, it was permeated with scrappy plays and fumbblings. Somehow, both teams seemed to lack team work which was probably due to early season, but each player had put up his best.

Tsang played his usual hard and clean game, scoring five goals.

C. G. Hoh worked hard at center and guarded Ling well. Ling was the pivot of the Black team and was the most dangerous man in team. S. D. Yuen and P. K. Lee are two new additions of the Amateurs at the guarding positions, and they did excellent work.

For the losers, Feng played well at right forward, and Liu did good guarding work.

Mr. Kwang refereed the game with fair decisions. The summaries:

Autumn Flower Show Is Finest For Years

The most successful Autumn flower show seen here in a number of years was that held yesterday at the Town Hall by the Shanghai Horticultural Society, and attendance figures showed a gratifying increase over previous seasons.

Although it was a bit late for the cream of the chrysanthemum crop, there was nevertheless a very fine showing of these colorful blossoms—the best showing, in fact, in about four years. Running the scale of all shades and sizes and in excellent bloom, they transformed the big drill hall into a colorful fairy garden and brought delight to the crowds who visited this show during the afternoon and evening.

The open classes, available to non-members of the Society, brought out a good number of entries, many of them excellent. The decorated tables were more numerous this year than ever before, but the quality was not so high, due, possibly, to the fact that the ladies had little time in which to arrange them, the hall not being available.

FINE VEGETABLE SHOW
The displays of fall vegetables were probably the best that have been seen here. These included specimens from the Municipal plots grown in activated sludge. Some especially fine potatoes, from seed imported several months ago from Scotland, cauliflower and sugar beets were to be seen in this exhibit. The best and most comprehensive group of vegetables came from Mr. D. MacGregor's private garden, their raising having been personally supervised by Mrs. MacGregor. It included tomatoes, green and red peppers, cauliflower, beet, artichokes, cabbage, turnips, lettuce, parsley, carrots, beans and other vegetables.

The Gardening Section of the British Women's Association had an attractive group of flowers and greenery in the center of the hall and it is hoped that at succeeding shows other local women's organizations will enter similar exhibits.

A novel feature was the collection of photographs of gardens and flower plots, in which Mrs. Scott, Dr. Bolton, and Mr. C. H. Ryde had some especially good views.

The miniature garden display also proved of much interest to visitors and won a great deal of praise.

Hand selections calveled the show and tea and other refreshments were served during the afternoon and evening.

Following is the prize list:

Wrigley To Manage Johnson Campaign

(Exclusive China Press)

Chicago, Nov. 20.—William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum king of America, will be in charge of the campaign of Senator Hiram Johnson of California for the Republican nomination for the Presidency, according to an announcement issued here today.

Mr. Wrigley, who became a millionaire through his ingenuity and business sagacity in manufacturing chewing gum that is chewed by practically every other man, woman and child in the United States, is also a baseball magnate, being one of the principal owners of the Chicago Cubs. He has taken an active interest in Republican politics in Illinois.

Senator Johnson is already assured of the active and energetic support of the numerous newspapers and magazines owned by William Randolph Hearst and strenuous efforts are now being made by his supporters to win over a large portion of the progressive press which as yet has not made known its affiliations in the coming campaign.

Air Mail Planes To Have Radio Sets

(Exclusive China Press)

Washington, Nov. 19.—Experiments conducted by United States army and navy aviators have proved the feasibility of attaching to air mail planes wireless apparatus which will permit the pilot to send and receive message while in flight.

This practice is now being followed out daily in maneuvers of army and navy planes at San Diego and San Pedro, Calif., where planes are enabled to maintain constant communication with ships of the battle fleet.

Rakusen Fined For Parking

Mr. C. P. Rakusen, 42 Whangpoo Road, was fined $3 and warned in the British Police Court yesterday when he was found guilty of obstructing traffic by parking his motor car on Nanking Road between Shantung Road and The Bund for fifty minutes on November 6. He had been warned of a similar offense on November 2. Mr. Rakusen contended that he was not obstructing traffic as there was little traffic to be obstructed at that time, but Magistrate G. W. King decided otherwise.

What I Found In Russia

BY CONGRESSMAN JAMES A. FREAR
Progressive Leader from Wisconsin in the House of Representatives

The impression exists in the United States that all the Bolsheviks and Soviets have bristling side whiskers, bushy eyebrows, protruding teeth and are of the type Jack the Giant Killer met and so gloriously vanquished in old time fairy tales. Commissioner of Foreign Trade Krassin gives the impression, however, of a normal Chicago business man who looks you straight in the eye, explains that Soviets hold their officials responsible for all concessions or business deals and then lays his cards on the table. He includes in concessions all the restrictions and is not giving away all the timber lands or mineral resources of Russia or Siberia without a just return to his government as he views it.

On two occasions, one at a table of four at luncheon, I talked to this man whose power over trade is probably greater than any man in Europe and he seemed one of the most normal of the party. He is not giving things away but pleasantly tells you what terms are satisfactory to his government.

I would place him in his gray business suit among a dozen or even three American business men and challenge the average onlooker to pick out Russia's powerful Commissioner from among the number. His manner is frank and engaging, neither brusque or conciliatory. He has a job to fill and was the man chosen for that job.

Acting Premier Kameneff is somewhat of a different type. He is temporarily filling the position during Lenin's illness. We met him at his office and talked over an hour. He does not speak English fluently like Krassin, but he is no less pleasant, courteous and apparently frank. He speaks Russian, German and French; but as none of our party talk anything but United States we were compelled to rely on Interpreter Connes, of the New York Supreme Court, who accompanies us and who speaks a number of languages.

Kameneff said that of Russia's 130,000,000 people, 500,000 in round numbers are Communists. He claims the Soviet Government is separate and distinct from the Communists in much the same manner that Republicans are separate from our Government with this difference: Republicans are kept lying awake nights through fear the wilful Democrats will steal away all the offices and some Governmental policies; whereas the Communists have things at this writing fairly well nailed down.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRESS

No other political party has much chance at present and with a constant liberalising of policies the Communists may hold the reins for a long time to come.

Kameneff was better dressed than any of his interlocutors, looks like a modest French professor, has a small goatee that is quite generally worn by the ministry, and his voice is quiet and his manner self-contained. He stated that while all the Commissioners are Communists, not over 50 percent of the officials, large and small, are of that party.

Even Postoffice appointments at home under the strict Civil Service rules that prevail somewhat will reach about 90 percent Republicans when Republicans are in, so the Communists have something yet to learn of practical politics.

Explaining the housing problems which still compel the government to ration out rooms, he said that in 1915 Moscow had a population of 2,500,000, which number is now back nearer normal or at about 1,500,000.

The Minister of Education, Lunacharsky, was formerly a writer, journalist, playwright, poet, literary critic, according to an introductory mention by one of the party. In like manner he is a linguist, but we have persuaded so many distinguished Communists to keep out of the United States that Lunacharsky has not found it necessary to acquire English.

He is a quiet, courteous gentleman, something of the same type as Kameneff, and in his hour's talk with us, while fifty people were waiting in the ante-room, he gave a frank, plain statement of educational statistics and conditions as he viewed them. He had a hard contest with the other agencies of government to get needed money for educational purposes, but now has nine percent of the budget appropriation for that purpose.

Remembering that over ninety percent of our own budget was given over for wars, past, present and future, and that an army of Treasury officials and Post Office appointees with many commissions got a good share of the remaining ten percent, I have a recollection that our own contribution nationally to education is small. However, here the Government is the managing director and pays the bills, whereas local branches of government do that duty with us.

School attendance, the Minister said, was down to 45 percent before the war, but reached 80 percent after the war and due to the famine and misery of the last two years it was back to 45 percent. A prediction was made that within eight or ten years there would be no illiteracy in Russia, of people under thirty-five years of age, and a compulsory educational act would soon be passed to that end.

In the army the soldiers are all taught reading and writing so that in three months every man is expected to be fairly proficient. While the army only numbers 610,000 men, the reserve troops who have been taught reach several times that number, and the ex-soldiers, on their return from service, are required to give special instruction in agriculture and the three "R's" to the peasants at home.

Minister Lunacharsky expressed disappointment that the only increase in educational statistics that could be vouched for between the Czar's regime and the present reached from 10 to 15 percent, due to terrible famines and revolutionary troubles, but things are rapidly improving.

In the eighty to eighty-five universities and colleges, not counting Ukraina or White Russia, about 150,000 students are in attendance. All colleges and all schools are co-educational. In the universities the estimated 30 percent are Communists and 70 percent are of peasant families or unknown. Eighty thousand students are in Moscow high schools and universities, of whom forty thousand are given financial aid by the government.

Seven thousand more students want to come in but no living quarters can be obtained. In the primary schools, some two hundred thousand in number if I remember correctly, only about 3 percent of the teachers are Communists. He advised us that Russia's problem was complicated by 30,000,000 Mohammedans in Turkestan and other branches of government.

We are not expecting to accept all the promises of improvement as certain but that the Great Russian Bear is shaking off its lethargy and illiteracy goes without question. Communism, atheism and other issues are present in the foreground with the Soviet Government, but the clergy claim 60,000 priests and the influence of civilisation will not let the Bear get back to a condition approaching Carlem.

I find only one or two ministers have been mentioned thus far and we have met several of equal prominence including Tchicherin of Foreign Affairs. If he should drift down on Wall Street, with his calm, composed business manner, little goatee and quiet business dress he would readily be mistaken for one of American's leading international financiers.

Leader Of Rebellion Eludes Arrest

Above is a splendid camera study of General von Luttwitz, German army commander in the World War, who instigated the now famous "Kapp Putsch" and who up to the present time has managed to escape arrest by the German authorities seeking him.

who may be recognised by that brief description.

Tchicherin and Nuorteva, his able assistant, have a grasp of foreign affairs that would do credit to any man. Both speak English and the popular goatee finds its place in this department.

Nuorteva gave time to take us out to the aviation field where we flew above the large army and artillery quarters near Moscow. Later he drove us out to the camp where about 2,000 of 17,000 soldiers were then going through military evolutions. We were joined by Petrofsky, the chief of all the military schools, who aided us throughout the inspection.

Petrofsky is smooth shaven, thirty-eight years old, a four year course graduate of Columbia University, New York, and a quiet and modest embryo U. S. Grant. We sampled the gold in the State Bank. It is real gold; 50,000,000 gold rubles were spread before us in ingots or bags. Professor Johnson jammed his thumb between two ingots of sixty pounds each, which he tried to lift and hold at arm's length.

The State Bank whose seventy million dollars of "chervonets" certificates are at a premium, showed us stacks of English pound notes, and even unfamiliar piles of $100 United States bills reaching into many millions in the aggregate, in addition to the $25,000,000 gold coin and bullion which is held to support its bank issues.

Altogether, it was a comfortable sight, greatly appreciated by me, whose familiarity with gold or bills beyond an extremely limited figure is only that of a spectator.

In fact, the Soviet Government, which its ministers constantly say is filled with experiments and mistakes, is also filled with constant surprises to those who think the little world in which they live comprises the bounds of the universe.

When Dreaded Croup Comes

A thing of dread, that comes in the night without warning. Just a hoarse, metallic cough, a choking, gasping for breath, a threat of suffocation. Oh! the relief of knowing that there is a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. See how it clears away the choking phlegm, stops the hoarse cough, and brings rest and sleep to the little sufferer. Sold everywhere.

Spot bar silver was up 1/4 d. and forward 1/4 d. in London yesterday. The New York price advanced to 64 cents and the London-New York cross rate to 433.

Our official Sterling rate here today was raised to 3s. 3d., the Gold Dollar rate to 70 1/2 the Yen rate dropped to 69 1/2 and the other rates changed accordingly.

Our market here today while less strong than yesterday, particularly for Sterling deliveries, was on the whole firm. There were sellers of Sterling at 3s. 3 1/4 d. for November delivery, 3s. 3 1/4 d. December and 3s. 3d. January.

There were sellers of Gold Dollars at 71 1/4 for November, 71 1/4 December and 71 for January. There were sellers of Yen at 67 1/2 November, 67 1/2 December and 68 January.

Banks were quoting 3s. 4 1/2 d. and 73 1/2 for Sterling and Gold Dollar bills for near delivery. For January bills could probably have been placed at 3s. 3 1/4 d. and 72 1/2 while bills after China New Year could have been placed at 3s. 3 1/4 d. and 72.

There were buyers of Franc bills at 137 1/2 for November-December delivery, 136 1/2 for January and 136 for forward.

India and China both bought silver in London on Saturday and the market is reported as steady. New York report their market as firm.

Arnold Compiles Figures On Damage In Japan

Interesting figures on the amount of damage done to business and industry in Japan as a result of the earthquake were gathered by Mr. Julian Arnold, American Commercial Attache at Peking, during his two months survey of conditions there, have just been made public in Shanghai.

The official figures for the number of people who perished in Tokio City are given as 59,065, and 15,674 wounded. In the sub-Prefectures surrounding Tokio the deaths are given as 60,143, and the wounded at 13,410. For Yokohama City the number of deaths are officially stated to be 23,400. It appears that the aggregate number of those who perished in all the regions covered will reach upwards, in official statements, 200,000. A number of Japanese and foreigners contend that the number of deaths have been minimized, and that the aggregate will reach between 400,000 and 500,000.

As for the damages to property, Tokio City Office in its statement of October 13 shows 225,000 buildings destroyed in Tokyo, a total of 5,550,000 tsubo (one tsubo equals 36 sq. ft.) The value of these buildings is estimated at Yen 1,500,000,000. The official findings for the other sections have not yet been made public. The aggregate of insurance policies covering the devastated regions is given as Yen 1,900,000. Calculating this as 70 percent of the actual value, we should have Yen 2,700,000,000, and estimating that less than 40 percent of the property was insured, our total value would reach Yen 8,000,000,000. Adding to this amount the losses of the Yokosuka Naval Station and other government properties, as well as indirect losses, it would seem that conservative estimate of the entire losses could not be less than Yen 14,000,000,000.

YOKOHAMA DAMAGE
Figures for Yokohama for damage to business houses and industries are, as follows:

Banks and Business Houses	Before the earthquake	Burned	Left
Banks	40	38	2
Silk Merchants	28	27	1
Trade firms	44	44	0
Warehousing firms	11	9	2
Transportation	108	101	7
Ship builders	8	5	3
Spinning firms	56	56	0
Chemical and drugs	21	19	2
Fire Insurance	8	8	0
Life Insurance	2	2	0
	326	309	17

The complete figures of the business establishments and industrial plants affected outside of Yokohama are not yet available.

DAMAGE STATISTICS
The Tokio Municipal Office estimates the number of factories destroyed as 7,102, which employed 72,000 laborers, representing 80 percent of the total number of factory workers in Tokio; the motors destroyed reached nearly 10,000. There are available several hundred thousand kilowatts of power, for which motors will have to be supplied. The figures of the other sections of the regions affected are not yet available. It appears that the Imperial Japanese Railway lost 33 locomotives, 500 passenger cars and 800 freight cars.

The Tokio Municipal Railways report that 931 of a total of 1,230 car bodies were destroyed. Most of the trucks can be repaired, but the motors will have to be replaced. The number of automobiles and trucks destroyed by the catastrophe are estimated at 1,200. Tokio lost 80,000 out of 80,000 telephones; Yokohama 10,000; and the other areas 10,000, a total of 80,000 destroyed. Tokio has secured 10,000 replacements. The government printing presses and the Bureau of Engraving, which was destroyed, represent a loss of Yen 50,000,000. The plates for printing the paper currency were, however, saved.

COTTON LOSSES
In the cotton spinning industry, the Japanese cotton spinners association give the figures for spindles destroyed as 500,000 and damaged 400,000. Hence, about 20 percent of all Japanese spindles were put out of action by reason of the earthquake and fire. Estimates for the damage to the silk industry show that the flatures were not in the area affected, whereas of the stocks of raw silk in Yokohama and vicinity, 35,000 bales were destroyed, which represents 25,000 export cargo (1 bale equals 135 lbs. value about gold $1,000). In the cement industry, out of a total capacity of 14,000,000 barrels annually, 8 percent were destroyed; it is expected however that additional equipment will increase the output of the industry to 17,000,000 barrels by the end of the year.

In the tobacco industry 1800 hoghead of American leaf and 3,300 short tons of Japanese leaf were destroyed. Of the twenty-three mills of the tobacco monopoly, the Asakura mill was completely destroyed and three others at Tokio partially destroyed. In the beer brewing industry, four of the eleven principal breweries were temporarily or permanently disabled, representing an aggregate capacity of 400,000 barrels per annum.

In Tokio, it is estimated 60 to 75 percent of the buildings were destroyed. Agriculturally the country suffered but little for the reason that the devastated areas embrace, for the most part, the cities of Yokohama, Tokio and suburbs. However, with the depletion of Tokio's population by upwards of 600,000 and by a still larger proportionate decrease of the population of

Before the earthquake	Burned	Left	No. of workers

Yokohama, the producers of perishable vegetables and fruits, and the fishermen dependent upon these markets, are suffering heavy losses, and their products have fallen nearly 50 percent in price. This year's rice crop prospects exceed expectations, and will be one-half of one percent above normal, with a total of 58,300,000 koku (1 koku equals 5.12 bushels). One of the significant effects of the catastrophe, however, is that hundreds of thousands of people have returned to the country districts. For days after the disaster, the trains were carrying free of charge tens of thousands of refugees, who returned to relatives in the country sections. This back-to-the-land movement is bound to affect the economic situation although it may be but temporarily.

Ambassador Woods Lauds Conduct Of Japanese In Quake

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Nov. 17.—A San Francisco despatch dated November 15 reports: Mr. Cyrus Woods, American Ambassador to Japan, arrived in San Francisco on the 14th and immediately proceeded to his native place. In the course of an interview with press representatives, the Ambassador narrated the impressions he received during the earthquake disaster in Japan and paid a high tribute to the courtesy of the Japanese people.

"Even in this moment of emergency and confusion, the Japanese people waited upon foreigners as if they were guests of honor," Mr. Woods said. "They endeavored to protect foreigners at the hazard of their lives. The whole-hearted gratitude shown by the Japanese for the sympathy and relief of the Government and the people of the United States is beyond description."

Y. 706,000,000 FOR REBUILDING QUAKE DISTRICT

Work Of Reconstruction Will Be Spread Over Period
Of Years

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, Nov. 18.—Apparently reliable reports detail the agreement on the reconstruction estimates reached by the Reconstruction Budget Committee in consultation with the Finance Department.

The agreement, which is now being submitted to the Reconstruction Advisory Council, provides a total expenditure for Tokio and Yokohama of Yen 705,000,000 over the first period of six years, terminating in March, 1929. It is understood that the work of reconstructing the cities will be spread over several periods to avoid as far as possible the necessity for a foreign loan. The estimates cover the cost of roads, canals and parks, and also subsidies for assisting industries, rebuilding public buildings, and interest on long term municipal loans in both cities.

It is stated that in the second term the expenditure will cover aerial defence of the capital and also underground railways. A conference of officials and labor employers' representatives has reached an agreement to stabilize the wage-scale for workers engaged in reconstruction, whereby skilled carpenters and others on a monthly wage will earn Yen 4.50 daily. Contract and day-by-day labor rates have also been fixed. The Unions have promised their adherence to the scales fixed and it is understood that wages for other classes of labor will be established as occasion demands.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)
Tokio, Nov. 18.—The Tokio Municipal Assembly today passed a resolution protesting against the Government's reconstruction proposals as disappointing in view of earlier official declaration being unworthy of the Capital of the Empire and no improvement on plans laid before the earthquake.

Schools In Peking Close Because Of Shortage Of Funds

Canton And Hongkong

THE "Canton Daily News" recently published an interesting article on the relations between the southern capital and Hongkong, existing in the first place of an intimation to the British port in particular and the world in general that it has amongst its officials men of first class calibre, of which "there is no shadow of doubt, no possible doubt, whatever." And after pointing to the records of Dr. Wu Ting-fang and his able son as men who have worked unceasingly towards the promulgation of better relations between these two important cities of the south, the newspaper in question holds out the promise that, when all the turmoil of fighting is over, the leaders will devote their attention to the work of reconstruction and there will be convincing proof of Canton's readiness to meet Hongkong more than halfway.

No one who has followed the fortunes of the administrations of both places will deny the statement that both have been guilty of mistakes, Hongkong, perhaps, because of the stony, official and typically British viewpoint from which things Chinese are so often viewed, and the leaders in Canton, because of their resentment of the somewhat casual treatment which, they complain, is their lot.

Undoubtedly one of the principal factors outside the prevalence of intestine warfare, which has contributed so much encouragement to the bandits and pirates of the South has been the fact that by reason of this estrangement there has been lacking that degree of co-operation in dealing with the evil which would naturally be expected of the governments of contiguous territories. That is a very mild way of putting the Cantonese point of view—they argue in effect, that no matter what may be the relations of Great Britain with Peking, they in Canton represent a de facto government and as such should be recognised for the purpose of finding solutions to problems common to both.

The weakness in the article referred to, however, is in the list of personages who are also members of the Cantonese government which includes men who, no matter how pro-British they may seem for purposes of expediency, have not the history behind them to arouse much enthusiasm in British official minds in the southern colony. The latter have their own way of looking at things, with possibly no small amount of justice on their side. They point to the fact that during the time certain parties are in power they receive little or no assistance from them with regard to solutions of mutual difficulties, that the absence of help often amounts to a positive hindrance in anything the British may do, and last that when the fortunes of a somewhat unstable government are against them, they are only too anxious to seek refuge and protection under that very aegis which they have so openly flouted in happier times. Such episodes as the seamen's strike—the knowledge that it was engineered in Canton, if not with the active assistance of those very leaders who are now alleged to be so friendly to Britain, at least with their tacit consent—do not tend to invite the confidence of the British officials in any rapprochement.

"No doubt it was wise to dissemble your love," the official in Hongkong can sing. "But why did you kick me downstairs?" The knowledge that these people are thus asking for a more friendly spirit between the two, must seem strange to British interests which witnessed this blow aimed straight at the economic life of the colony, who must have been aware and probably are now of the scheme to create a southern port intended to enter into effective competition and if possible wipe out Hongkong. And this not because there is any real complaint as to the service which Hongkong gives southern China, but rather because it is British.

Officials in Hongkong will naturally examine any overtures of friendliness with the utmost caution. They will see Canton go more than the halfway promised by the Canton Daily News, and even then hesitate about accepting the proffered amity. And in this lies danger. We can understand the Cantonese coming forward avec un beau geste and appealing for greater friendship; we can picture the unenthusiastic manner in which the British are almost bound to greet the overtures, and the consequent disappointment and embittering of the Cantonese. At the same time we think that this may be averted to a great extent by carefully conducted negotiations in private, an exploring of the ground to see first where agreement can lead to better things, for if the "Canton Daily News" expects that the administration in Hongkong will be falling over itself to grasp the hand which it is suggested is soon to be proffered, it is apt to be disappointed.

We should be the last to wish this to occur. It is no part of the American policy in the Far East to desire that any foreign nation should be "at outs" with any section of the Chinese. Rather would we welcome an atmosphere of friendship. For this reason we hope that the promises of the editorial writer in Canton have a solid substratum of fact; we hope, too, that the British will examine any overtures in friendly spirit and that a real attempt will be made to find some solid ground for amity.

And in passing on this subject we cannot but think that the moment chosen for this editorial appeal was not altogether opportune. Had it been thrown out when the Canton government was less pre-occupied than it is at the moment and the fortunes of Dr. Sun's party less frayed by adversity, it is possible that it would have carried more weight in the quarters to which it is manifestly addressed. This is a matter which can be remedied if Dr. Sun emerges victorious from the engagements with which at this writing he is having none too good a time. And made then it should certainly earn the careful consideration of those to whom it will be addressed.

As The Missionaries Think

It is generally conceded that foreigners engaged in missionary work in China are more closely in touch with Chinese thought than are foreigners engaged in business or other occupations which do not bring them into daily and intimate contact with the Chinese people. For this reason it is of unusual interest at this time to have at hand the 1923 edition of the China Mission Year Book published by the Christian Literature Society of Shanghai which contains in its 370 pages the composite ideas of leading missionaries from all parts of China regarding China conditions. A number of Chinese writers in close touch with foreign missionary work also contribute to the pages of this interesting book.

The first chapter which was written by Dr. Harley Farnsworth MacNair of St. John's University, Shanghai, deals with the "Present Political Tendencies in China" and since this is a subject of interest to every one on account of the present situation in China it is important to note that in Dr. MacNair's opinion recent events in China "seem to show that China is not yet ready for responsible Cabinet or Parliamentary government. Honest and able officials are not numerous and powerful enough to turn out the old-style mandarin and the 'republican-style' militarist from office. Thus the two main types of Western Republican government judged from the Executive point of view seem to have failed in China: the Presidential under Yuan Shih-kai, and the Parliamentary under his successors."

Dr. MacNair the writer of the chapter under discussion is himself a professor of history and probably a deeper student of political tendencies in China than most modern observers of conditions in the Far East. Therefore his impressions carry weight when he says, "To those who are in any wise familiar with pre- or post-Revolutionary China, it is not surprising that both Presidential and Parliamentary or Cabinet government are at least temporarily failures. The latter type has succeeded only in countries whose peoples have had long experience in self-government of a positive and constructive nature. Chinese experience in self-government has been largely negative or obstructive, and has been limited to the smallest area of local government namely the village. It is scarcely surprising therefore that Parliamentary government has not been a success."

Considerable attention is given to the subject of "provincial autonomy," "provincial independence," and "federalism," terms which are not synonymous but, as the author says, "one might think they were from the frequency with which they are used interchangeably in China." The custom of the provinces when displeased with any move on the part of Peking to circularise the other provinces by telegram declaring its independence, receives considerable comment and in this connection Dr. MacNair quotes a Chinese student as saying that this provincial autonomy does not so much constitute a development of federalism as it does of feudalism. Mention is made of the provincial constitutions which have been completed or are under way in Hunan, Hupeh, Kweichow, Kwangtung, Szechuan and Chekiang and an analysis of one of the typical constitutions is given to show the tendency of this development.

The one analyzed is that of Chekiang province adjacent to Shanghai which starts out with a bill of rights setting forth "that citizens of the province are all equal before the law, without distinction on account of race, religion, class or sex." And of special interest from the standpoint of provincial autonomy is Section 32 of Article III which declares that "No laws of the National Government and no treaties with foreign states, which infringe the powers of this Province or increase its obligations, shall be made without the previous consent of the Province." And then there is a provision stating that "The functions and powers of the National Government shall be exercised by the Government of the Province until a National Constitution is established—furthermore—until Provincial laws are promulgated, the laws of the Republic of China and orders based upon these laws, which are not in conflict with the constitution of this Province may still be applied."

Dr. MacNair's comment on this is to the effect that "this is autonomy with a vengeance," for the reason that not only during the interim in which there is no permanent constitution, but even permanently, provincial law takes precedence over national laws." In addition to this discussion of the development of provincial autonomy, the author discusses the significance of the feminist movement in China and two examples showing the growth of municipal government, those of Nantunghow, the industrial city on the Yangtze which has been built up by Mr. Chang Chien and Canton where a commission form of government was put into effect by Dr. Sun Yat-sen and operated with some degree of efficiency until the recent disruption caused by the bringing into Canton of the outside troops from Yunnan by Dr. Sun in his attempt to even scores with General Chen Chiung-ming. Considerable space is also devoted to the spread of bolshevik ideas in China which the author considers to be much more widespread than is generally realised. He concludes with the following significant comment:

"One of the lessons of the past ten years is so clear that men of even moderate intelligence can understand: this is that the development of good government in China, and the settlement of the difficult relations between the provinces and the central government will be attained by preparation and development from the ground up rather than from the top down. The conjoint development of a decent and stable government in the districts, towns, and provinces may lead to the formation of a real federal government despite the present lack of any indisputable proofs of the formation of such a type." And then of vital importance in this development is the attitude of the foreigners.

"The hypothesis and suggestions—depend for their fruition upon the functioning of an independent Chinese government pursuing a policy of moderation and liberal friendship with the great Powers. It is only with the friendly co-operation of these Powers demonstrated either actively or passively that China can pass safely through the chaos in which she now labors."

The editor of the China Mission Year Book is Dr. Frank Rawlinson and with him in the work of producing the book were associated, Mrs. Lawrence Thurston, Rev. F. D. Gamewell, Prof. T. C. Chao, Rev. H. K. Wright, Miss Helen Thurston, Rev. D. McGillivray, P. S. Chuan and Rev. E. C. Lobenstein.

Editorial Comments

THIS is the time of the year when smallpox makes an appearance in the Settlement, and although at present it is not as prevalent as people might be led to believe the number of cases at the Isolation Hospital is such as to cause concern. As every one should know, vaccination confers practical immunity, and it is hoped some means might be used by the Port Health authorities to apprise passengers coming into Shanghai of the dangers of being unvaccinated, and also notices should be posted up at the hotels recommending vaccination. Smallpox comes on about this time of the year and it continues until well past the Chinese New Year. In fact this year it continued until May, but it rarely prolongs into the Summer. Practically speaking, it is a seasonal prevalence.

Compared with last year, the number of cases shows a slight increase, and in this connection we must not overlook the refugee element in our midst, as it is the unvaccinated portion of the community. Special warnings have already been issued by the Public Health Office, and in China, where smallpox is so persistent and often of an intense, swiftly fatal virulence, it is timely. In Hongkong smallpox has increased to epidemic proportions, there being reported there last month no less than 132 cases and 111 deaths. In Shanghai fortunately the death toll is nothing like what it has been in the Southern Colony, but if every one takes upon himself the duty of vaccinating himself, his household and staff the dangers would be greatly minimised.

The risk of being infected with the disease this winter in Shanghai will probably be greater than usual, as the Commissioner of Public Health has already pointed out in the Municipal Gazette. It is apparently based upon the fact that smallpox has been smouldering in Hongkong all summer and a number of cases have occurred during the past few months among refugees and those who had neglected vaccination.

The campaign of vaccination has already started in earnest by the branch health offices and vigorous free vaccinations are being made daily. There is no cause for alarm as yet, for the small number of deaths and admissions lend support to the belief that the Public Health authorities have the situation well in hand. It is interesting to add, that last month there were two deaths from smallpox (one foreign and one native) and four foreign and four native admissions into the Isolation Hospital. September showed a clean bill, while in August there were three native deaths and one native admission into the Isolation Hospital. In July last the tables read two foreign and three native deaths and one foreign and four native admissions. In June there were five deaths (one foreign) and eight admissions (four foreign). May registered a big jump, there being in that month 17 admissions (seven foreign) and five deaths, one of which was foreign.

Taking the present month into consideration, there appears to have been an increase in the number of cases but not deaths, for there was reported only one foreign case for the week ending November 1 and no Chinese death. For the week ending November 11 there were four foreign cases and one Chinese death. There is thus no cause for alarm, but the necessity of vaccination is overwhelming.

LUCIUS ANNAEUS SENECA

CAPREAE is a little island of surpassing loveliness, forming one extremity of the Bay of Naples. Its soil is rich, its sea der you." bright and limpid, its breezes cool and healthful. Isolated by its position, it is yet within easy reach of Rome. At that time, before the Vesuvius had rekindled those wasteful fires which first shook down, and then deluged under lava and scoriae, the little cities of Herculaneum and Pompeii, the scene which it commanded was even more preeminently beautiful than now. Vineyards and olive-moves clothed the sides of that matchless bay, down to the very line where the bright blue waters seem to kiss with their ripples the many-colored pebbles of the beach. Over all, with its sides dotted with picturesque villas and happy villages, towered the giant cone of the volcano which for centuries had appeared to be extinct, and which was clothed up to the very crater with luxurious vegetation. Such was the delicious home which Tiberius disgraced forever by the seclusion of his old age. Here he abandoned himself to every refinement of wickedness, and from hence, being by common consent the most miserable of men, he wrote to the Senate that memorable letter in which he confessed his daily and unutterable misery under the stings of a guilty conscience, which neither solitude nor power enabled him to escape.

Never did a fairer scene under go a worse degradation; and here, in one or other of the twelve villas which Tiberius had built, among the azure grottoes which he caused to be constructed, the youthful Caius grew up to manhood. It would have been a terrible school even for a noble nature: for a nature corrupt and bloodthirsty like that of Caius it was complete and total ruin. But though he was so obsequious to the Emperor as to originate the fest that never had there been a worse master and never a more cringing slave,—though he suppressed every sign of indignation at the horrid deaths of his mother and his brothers,—though he assiduously reflected the looks, and carefully echoed the very words, of his patron—yet not even by the deep dissimulation which such a position required did he succeed in concealing from the penetrating eye of Tiberius the true ferocity of his character.

Not being the acknowledged heir to the kingdom,—for Tiberius Gemellus, the youthful grandson of Tiberius, was living, and Caius was by birth only his grand-nephew,—he became a tool for the machinations of Macro the praetorian praefect and his wife Lollia. One of his chief friends was the cruel Herod Agrippa, who put to death St. James and imprisoned St. Peter, and whose tragical fate is recorded in the twelfth chapter of the Acts. On one occasion, when Caius had been abusing the dictator Sulla, Tiberius scornfully remarked that he would have all Sulla's vices and none of his virtues; and on another, after a quarrel between Caius and his cousin, the Emperor embraced with tears his young grandson and said to the frowning Caius, with one of those strange flashes of prevision of which we sometimes read in history. "Why are you so eager? Some day you will kill this boy, and some one else will murder you." There were some who believe that Tiberius deliberately cherished the intention of allowing Caius to succeed him, in order that the Roman world might relent towards his own memory under the tyranny of a worse monster than himself. Even the Roman, who looked up to the family of Germanicus with extraordinary affection, seem early to have lost all hopes about Caius. They looked for little improvement under the government of a vicious boy, "ignorant of all things, or nurtured only in the worst," who would be likely to reflect the influence of Macro, and present the spectacle of a worse Tiberius under a worse Sejanus.

At last health and strength failed Tiberius, but not his habitual dissimulation. He retained the same unbending soul, and by his fixed countenance and measured language, sometimes by an artificial affability, he tried to conceal his approaching end. After many restless changes, he finally settled down in a villa at Misenum which had once belonged to the luxurious Lucullus. There the real state of his health was discovered. Charicles, a distinguished physician, who had been paying him a friendly visit on his way to bid farewell, managed to ascertain the state of his pulse. Suspecting that this was the case, Tiberius, concealing his displeasure, ordered a banquet to be spread, as though in honor of his friend's departure, and stayed longer than usual at table.

A similar story is told of Louis XIV. who, noticing from the whispers of his courtiers that they believed him to be dying, ate an unusually large dinner on the very day of his death, and sarcastically observed, "Il me semble que pour un homme qui va mourir je ne mange pas mal." But, in spite of the precautions of Tiberius, Charicles informed Macro that the Emperor Tiberius, in the seventy-eighth year of his age, such was the death, and so miserable had been the life of the man to whom the Tempter had already given "the kingdoms of the world and the glory of them," when he tried to tempt with them the Son of God. That this man should have been the chief Emperor of the earth at a time when its true King was living as a peasant in his village home at Nazareth, is a fact suggestive of many and of solemn thoughts.

Something To Think About

By Bruno Lessing

Y MEN, MANY MINDS Europe, predicts another general director of a Chicago war. He bases his prediction on just returned from upon the character of the new music he heard while abroad. This music, he says, is swift, hysterical, frenzied and indefinable. Therefore we shall have war.

It is interesting to learn that music foretells the future. The hundreds of thousands of human beings in this country who speculate in Wall Street or gamble on horse races might learn a few things to their advantage by hanging around music halls and studying the latest tunes.

There is an old story of a barber who journeyed afoot to Rome on a pilgrimage and, on his return, had no other recollection of the Eternal City than that the Pope was poorly shaved.

"Pussyfoot" Johnson predicts that Europe will go to smash if it does not adopt prohibition. Every banker who has returned from a pleasure trip abroad has attributed Europe's troubles to its financial methods and has predicted widespread ruin unless some country did so and so.

Travelling clergymen predict that Europe is on the road to perdition because its people have forsaken religion.

Probably if an enthusiastic fisherman went abroad he would think that Europe has no hope on earth because the fish do not bite.

It all would be comical if so many people were not misled by such idiotic prognostications.

Europe is in a bad way. Not the slightest doubt of it. And many unhappy days will pass before Europe becomes normal again. But, whether or not there will be another general war, nobody knows. In fact, no living being can foretell what will happen.

If you feel that Mr. Loud Mouth is right and you are absolutely sure that a great war is coming, you can make a great fortune on a very small investment. But, really, you would be foolish to risk a cent. Anyway, you will find, on investigation, that Mr. Loud Mouth does not invest his own money to back up his own prediction.

She Pays

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

Of course, she pays. Woman, like the other half of the human species, must give a price for what she gets.

It is a law of nature; the stern law of compensation, nothing for nothing.

For every gain a loss—which may, after all, be only a greater gain in unpleasant disguise.

Not even male chivalry can win the female of the species the indulgence of absolution from this common subjection to nature's law.

And so she pays.

Not that another tear is here sought as tribute to melodramatic sob stuff.

A man and a woman having "sinned"—she never sins alone—we are wont to say: It is the woman that pays—and pays and pays!

What is in the writer's mind is a recent case in California. Charles Scanton haled his wife into court, demanding alimony pending trial of his suit for separate maintenance.

He is ill, unable to work. His wife, Scanton claimed, deserted him, though she earns $150 a week.

Judge Summerfield evidently sympathizes with this fellow man, for he not only granted the requested alimony, but he said:

"This couple married for better or worse. The husband has broken in harness. I am afraid the wife will have to pull a double load, for a while at least. Marriage is a case of give and take."

The incident suggests lots of fun, an endless string of jokes, and that every one should then leave the chamber. Such was the miserable and unprofitable end of the that readers may develop for themselves and perhaps send in as paid contributions to newspapers.

To the writer it happens that the serious aspects of the case are more interesting. First of all the theory of democracy itself is involved. And then there is the practical question of the relation of a man and woman in marriage.

Extreme feminists, both female and male, have for some time been asserting the full equality of the sexes in all relationships.

The winning of the ballot for women is a first victory; the outward symbol of equal social status.

A decision like this judge's is a further application of the democratic principle in the most intimate of human relationships.

All other relationships must only be democratized.

Fifty-fifty, that is what marriage must be. "Give-and-take" is its slogan.

That can not very well mean fifty-fifty financially, while women bear the domestic burden of children and household care.

But it can, should, and does commonly mean a sharing of sorrows and halving them, a sharing of joys and doubling them, a sharing of responsibilities and making them light because love gives the strength to bear them.

Really, it is a case of hundred-hundred, the readiness to give and to gain the full benefit of whole-hearted co-operation.

Amazing Rescue

Few more thrilling stories have ever been told than that of the rescue of five of the miners entombed in the flooded coal pit at Reddings, in Shropshire. Trapped by the in-rushing water, the men wandered about, in it waist-deep until they found a dry patch in their underground prison, and on this they crouched for nine days in the darkness, crawling up and down to keep themselves warm. Their only food was half a slice of bread, which they shared between them, and they drank the flood water to keep themselves alive.

Yet they kept up their spirits heroically. When the rescuers reached them, supplies of hot Bovril, blankets and hot water bottles were rushed down the mine to the spot. The men drank the Bovril with hearty expressions of approval, but rejected the blankets and hot water bottles, and they insisted on crawling unaided a long distance to the foot of the shaft by which they were raised to the pit-head. Having crawled so many days, they said, they might as well complete the job and "keep on crawling."—Exchange.

Stimulating Discourses

Emperor could not last beyond two days.

A scene of secret intrigue at one began. The court broke up into knots and cliques. Hasty messengers were sent to the provinces and their armies, until at last, on the 16th of March, it was believed that Tiberius had breathed his last. Just as on the death of Louis XV. a sudden noise was heard as of thunder, the sound of courtiers rushing along the corridors to congratulate Louis XVI. in the famous words, "Le roi est mort, vive le roi!" so a crowd instantly thronged round Caius with their congratulations, as he went out of the palace to assume his imperial authority. Suddenly a message reached him that Tiberius had recovered voice and sight. Seneca says, that feeling his last hour to be near, he had taken off his ring, and, holding it in his shut left hand, had long lain motionless; then calling his servants, since no one answered his call, he rose from his couch, and, his strength falling him, after a few tottering steps fell prostrate on the ground.

The news produced the same consternation as that which was produced among the conspirators at Adonijah's banquet, when they heard of the measures taken by the dying David. There was a panic-stricken dispersion, and every one pretended to be grieved, or ignorant of what was going on. Caius, in stupefied silence, expected death instead of empire. Macro alone did not lose his presence of mind. With the utmost intrepidity, he gave orders that the old man should be suffocated by heaping over him a mass of clothes.

Princes Are Few
For Royal Maids

Cupid Boked By The War; Olga Of Greece
Lucky To Attract A Mate Of Her Own Rank

BY F. CUNLIFFE-OWEN, O.B.E.

The engagement of Prince Paul of Serbia and Princess Olga of Greece has revived the discussion of the difficulties that confront the royal persons of Europe who seek mates. Princess Olga is accounted a lucky girl. Impoverished by recent political events in Greece, she is to marry a great wealth. Better still, she is in love with Paul and he with her. But best of all—and this is what the matchmaking mothers of the royal society have most in mind—she is to marry a man of her own station in life.

The good fortune of finding a mate of equal rank cannot fall to the lot of all the marriageable Princesses of Europe now-a-days. There are a fairly large number of such young women, and if they resolve to wed none but Princes of the blood many of them will have to remain single. For the royal society is not what it was before 1914. Half of Europe is not speaking to the other half, and the list of Princes that any Princess may consider is lamentably short.

The war has left so many painful memories that generations will pass before there can be matrimonial alliances between members of the dethroned dynasties and members of the sovereign houses of the Entente. German and Austrian Princes and Princesses realise that they owe the loss of their crowns and their fortunes to the victorious powers in the international conflagration. Nor can the scions of their foes forget the enmity of Germany and of Austria-Hungary.

The war may be said to have raised insuperable barriers, for example, between the reigning house of Great Britain and the former royal houses of Germany. And the great conflict must prove a still greater obstacle to any relationships between Teuton sons and daughters of rank and the surviving children of the Imperial family of Romanoff, who blame the Kaiser's precipitation of the war for their misfortunes.

Yet for the better part of two centuries the Romanoffs, like the reigning houses of Great Britain, were accustomed to seek their consorts among the royal houses of Germany. All of the sons of King George III. of England and most of his daughters married Teuton royalty, and so, too, did five of the daughters and three of the sons of Queen Victoria; while Bismarck used to say, in his frank fashion, that all that the petty sovereign dynasties of Germany were good for was to supply mothers for the children of Muscovite Grand Dukes.

INTERNATIONAL MARRIAGE

A FAILURE
Aside from this intense bitterness among the reigning houses of Europe as a result of the war, the prejudices of their people have to be taken into consideration. Formerly it was believed that international marriage served as an instrument of peace and a safeguard against war. But in the last great struggle these alliances proved an entire failure. That the Czarina and most of the consorts of the Romanoff Grand Dukes were of German birth did not prevent Germany from carrying fire and sword into Russia.

Nor did the circumstance that the Kaiser, his brother, Prince Henry of Prussia, and their consorts were sons of British Princesses and all in the line of succession to the British crown cause them to hesitate a second about taking up arms against England.

King Albert's mother, the late Countess of Plankers, was a Princess of Hohenzollern, and his Queen was a Bavarian Princess; yet Germany invaded his dominions, breaking her treaty, pledges regarding Belgium's neutrality and subjecting the Belgian people to such treatment as to arouse the indignation of the world.

Likewise, there have been several marriages between the royal house of Italy and the houses of Austria, Saxony and Bavaria. Nevertheless Saxony, Bavaria and the Dual Empire assailed Italy. And despite his popularity of the consort of Victor Emmanuel III. in the land of her adoption, Italy declined to raise a finger to save Montenegro from seizure by Austria, or her father, the late King Nicholas, from the loss of his throne.

In fact, royal and imperial marriages have been more productive of war than of peace. The so-called Wars of the Spanish Succession, which wrought such misery in Europe in the eighteenth century, were the result of one of these alliances. So was the conflict between Great Britain and Spain that culminated in the destruction of the Spanish Armada. And France and England warred for three hundred years as an outcome of the union between Henry II. of England and the divorced Queen of Louis VII. of France.

PRINCE PAUL AND PRINCESS OLGA

History is full of wars growing out of royal marriages; and history will tell some day to what extent the latter-day animosity between London and Berlin was brought about through the treatment which Queen Victoria's eldest daughter, the Princess Royal, who died as Empress Frederick, received in the land to which her marriage took her.

Hence it is that Europe views with an attentiveness born of both hope and fear any move in the matrimonial game, and hence it is that the betrothal of Olga of Greece to Prince Paul of Serbia attracts wide comment.

With this royal engagement there disappears for the matrimonial market perhaps the most attractive of its marriageable Princesses. Born to great wealth, she will come to her fiancé as a virtually portionless bride. For her mother, Grand Duchess Helena of Russia, only daughter of the late Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Vladimir, was accounted

Edith Kelly Gould Retains Name

Edith Kelly Gould, wife.

Edith Kelly Gould, shown here in her dressing room in the Alhambra Theatre, in Paris, where she is making a success as a dancer, is the divorced wife of Frank J. Gould, one of the sons of the late Jay Gould. As Edith Kelly, she was a hit on the stage when Gould married her. When she was billed to appear in Paris as "Edith Kelly Gould" Gould sought an injunction to prevent her use of the Gould name, but the French courts refused to grant it.

a great heiress when, after jilting in turn Prince Maximilian of Baden and General Prince Louis Bonaparte of the Russian cavalry, she bestowed her hand upon Prince Nicholas of Greece, younger brother of the late King Constantine.

Most of Helene's wealth was derived from interests in Russia, and was confiscated, along with the property of the imperial family, after the overthrow of the monarchy at Petrograd six years ago. She found herself almost penniless. To make matters worse, her husband, in the troubles at Athens which resulted in King Constantine's deposition and banishment, sided with his brother, followed him into exile and today is divested of all his Hellenic honors and emoluments as well as of his liberal income from the royal civil list as a Prince of the blood. With whatever property he possessed in Greece sequestered by the present Government, he experiences difficulty in making both ends meet.

Early last year a match was arranged for his eldest daughter, Olga, with the Crown Prince of Denmark, whose mother, Queen Alexandrine, and whose grandmother, Queen Louise, possess big private fortunes that have come to them through inheritance. The alliance seemed to offer many advantages. But the Crown Prince is so absorbed by music and by his real genius for composition that Princess Olga became convinced that she would never be anything but a secondary interest in his life. So, following the example of her brilliant mother in analogous circumstances, she broke with him, although, strangely enough, her name appears as his consort in the pages of the current edition of the usually correct Almanach de Gotha.

Although Prince Paul's prospects of succeeding to his cousin's throne of Yugoslavia have diminished since young Queen Maria of Serbia gave birth to a son and heir at Belgrade a few weeks ago, he remains a very desirable match. For he is rich through his mother, one of the Princesses of that house of Demidoff whose name is a synonym for colossal wealth in Europe and Asia. Moreover, he was brought up almost entirely in England, was a classmate of the Prince of Wales at Magdalen College, Oxford, is good-looking, an adept in all British sports, a favorite at the court and in society, and fought with conspicuous gallantry in the great war. As he has so many tastes in common with Princess Olga, it is fairly certain that she will refrain from turning him down and go with him to the altar.

THE PRINCESS "MARKET"
Princess Olga has two pretty sisters. Elisabeth, aged 19, and Marina, 17, who have no other portion than their good looks. They are much liked in England, where they make their home with their parents. They have two marriageable though less comely cousins, Marguerite and Theodora, daughters of Prince Andrew of Greece, who came to the United States last winter with his Battenberg consort. These young women are even more badly off for riches than Prince and Princess Nicholas. They have made their home in England since their exile from Greece.

There are also the two younger daughters of Prince Charles of Sweden, the Princesses Martha and Astrid. And there is, of course, Princess Ilana, the winsome and still very youthful daughter of Queen Marie of Rumania. She has been frequently put forward as a likely consort for the Prince of Wales and also destined to become the wife of Prince Paul of Greece, who, owing to the childlessness of the union of his brother, King George II., is the next in line of succession to his throne.

Then there are a few marriageable Princesses of royal birth who, because they belong to the Roman Catholic Church, are precluded from matrimonial alliances with English Princes of the blood. They include Princess Hilda, sister of the reigning Grand Duchess Isabelle and Françoise of Orleans, daughters of the royal Duc de Guise, whose father, as the late Duc de Chartres, fought under the Union flag throughout the greater part of the American war of secession, together with his older brother, the late Count of Paris. There is also the Infanta Isabella of Spain, now in her nineteenth year, and daughter of the late Infanta Mercedes, who, from the time of the death of her father, Alfonso XIII., until the posthumous birth, six months later, of her brother, Alfonso XIII., occupied the throne of Spain as a six-year-old Queen.

Two years ago a matrimonial alliance had, to all intents and purposes, been arranged between Princess Yolanda, eldest daughter of the King and Queen of Italy, and the gallant young Crown Prince of Belgium, who accompanied his parents on the occasion of their memorable visit to America. His education may be said to have been unique. When there was hard fighting in the four years of the great war, he was to be found in the front line trenches of the Belgian Army, under heavy German fire, serving as a private and sharing all the fatigues and dangers of the older comrades. When there was any let-up in the actual fighting, he was sent back to England to continue his studies at Eton. There, like the sons of King George, he was treated by his fellow-pupils without any regard whatsoever to his royal birth and rank. Indeed, the only consideration he received from the boys was due to his having been under fire in the trenches.

The state visit of his parents to Rome was to have been made the occasion of announcing his engagement to Princess Yolanda. But the stay of the royal party at Rome was brought to a close without the announcement, and afterward it became known that the heart of Princess Yolanda had been bestowed upon young Count Valvi, one of the most gallant officers of the Italian cavalry, scion of an ancient house of the petty nobility of Piedmont and possessed of a modest fortune. Their marriage took place last Spring amid every manifestation of popular approval.

FATE VS. MATCHMAKERS
In spite of this failure of the matrimonial project of the rulers of Italy and of Belgium, who have become attached to one another by ties of the closest friendship, they were reported last Summer to have made fresh plans for the happiness of their children, plans which became the subject of much sympathetic discussion at home and abroad. According to these, the Belgian Crown Prince was to marry Princess Mafalda of Italy.

It was with a view of concluding the arrangements for this alliance that the King and Queen of the Belgians, accompanied by their eldest son, the Duke of Brabant, and by their daughter, Princess Jose, arrived last month to stay with King Victor Emmanuel and his consort and children at their country palace of Racconigi, on the Gulf of Genoa. But a few days after their arrival, when everything seemed propitious to the plans of the parents, Princess Mafalda suddenly grew ill and the royal project fell through. Superstitious people in Italy have come to the conclusion that no matrimonial alliance between their reigning family and the royal house of Belgium will ever take place, and that since Providence has manifestly some other projects for the children of their King and Queen, it would be unwise to run counter to the decrees of Heaven, where all really successful marriages are made.

In view of the past in Italy and elsewhere it is probable that there will be much less interference in the future with matrimonial alliances of the royal Princes and Princesses of Europe. True, since monarchs nowadays reign no longer by divine privilege but by the will of the people, the people have the right to raise objections to the consorts of those who are likely to be called upon to rule over them, and to veto the choices, in that event the contracting parties are free to wed provided they waive their rights of succession to the crown. Thus it is quite probable that the people of England would voice, through Parliament, their disapproval of any scheme for marrying one of the sons of King George to a Princess of one of the former sovereign houses of Germany.

But no objection would be raised if the young scion of the British reigning house should follow the advice of his heart and wed one of his father's subjects or even an American girl of the Protestant faith. And while, if his bride were a Roman Catholic, he would forfeit his place in the line of succession to the crown by the terms of the Constitution, there are no such impediments to his wedding a Greek Catholic or a girl of any non-Christian creed.

England's her apparent will be subjected to no such restrictions, as stood in the way of the marriages of those who have preceded him in the role of Prince of Wales. The general impression is that he will seek a consort outside the pale of royalty, and none of his future subjects will be disposed to criticize him if he does. The choice of a bride of royal birth and of his own rank would be exceeding limited under present circumstances, and it cannot be said that any of the marriageable Princesses of the sovereign or formerly reigning houses of Europe bring in their train sufficient dynastic or political advantages to cause either the Prince of Wales or his brothers to make a sacrifice of their own inclinations and affections.

Their marriages will be "made in Heaven," not in Downing Street.
